Internet Business Strategy Company Offers Free Classes to Military Veterans In honor of Veterans Day 2011

In honor of Veterans Day 2011 Micro Biz Coach provides free access to business start-up webinars for those who have served in the United States military.

Columbus, Ohio – November 10, 2011 – Micro Biz Coach LLC respects the service of American military men and women and is offering military veterans free access to its popular Webinars for Military Veteran Business Owners Series. This series of webinars provides information critical to the success of a start-up or developing military veteran business owner.

"Micro Biz Coach wants to lead the entrepreneurial community in giving something substantial back to those who have been economically impacted by the rigors of military service," Nicole Washington, president and CEO of Micro Biz Coach LLC., said. "Some veterans are not aware of the tools available to them when they re-enter civilian life after being away in military service for so many years. All of us know at least one military veteran whether it be our family member, neighbor next door or college classmate. We hope the country will partner with us and either do something within your power to help a veteran or help us in our efforts by spreading the word."

“Micro Biz Coach wants to lead the entrepreneurial community in giving something substantial back to those who have been economically impacted by the rigors of military service,” Nicole Washington, president and CEO of Micro Biz Coach LLC., said.

Part one of the Webinars for Military Veteran Business Owners Series acts as a micro business coach for early stage companies. Series topics include “Starting a Business as a Military Veteran,” “How Military Veteran Businesses Can Use Social Media,” “Free Internet Tools for Military Veteran Businesses” and “Contracting with the Federal Government.” Qualified veterans can sign up at Micro-Biz-Coach-For-Veterans.com. The website also includes a forum area where they can talk with each other about the issues and solutions veterans encounter in the world of business.

“The economic crisis many families are experiencing prevents them from paying the hundreds of dollars required to join a webinar or attend a conference that gives the type of information veterans need to develop a successful business. We hope to help alleviate the financial burden while providing essential technology and business training,” Washington said.
